

New Child-Size Face Mask with Disney Characters Makes Protection Fun!

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that patients with undiagnosed respiratory symptoms be asked to wear a face mask in waiting rooms. Therefore, it is recommended that children with coughs and sneezes have child-size masks available to protect themselves and those around them. Kimberly-Clark is the first company to have designed a mask specifically to fit small faces understanding that adult masks cannot provide the fit, comfort and protection children need.
